

Untitled

Thomas Van Hoey

29/3/2018

Contents

0.1 R Markdown . . . . .	1
--------------------------	---

0.1 R Markdown

2a

Example (1) is well-known from the literature on parasitic gaps. Here we are concerned with example formatting, not with the interesting syntax.

(1) I wonder which article John filed  $\{t\}$  without reading  $\{e\}$ .

It is beyond the scope of this investigation to determine exactly why John did not read the article.

Multipart examples are equally straightforward.

(2) Two examples of parasitic gaps.

- a. He is the man that John did not interview  $\{e\}$  before he gave the job to  $\{e\}$ .
- b. He is someone who John expected  $\{e\}$  to be successful though believing  $\{e\}$  to be incompetent.

Here, we can speculate on why John did not do an interview before recommending the person for a job. It is likely that the person was a crony of John. In (2b), perhaps John knew that the “someone” went to prep school with the owner of the business.

(3) Mary<sub>i</sub> ist sicher, dass es den Hans nicht st”oren w”urde seiner Freundin
Mary is sure that it the- $\{ACC\}$  Hans not annoy would his- $\{DAT\}$  girlfriend- $\{DAT\}$
ihr<sub>i</sub> Herz auszusch”utten.
her- $\{ACC\}$  heart- $\{ACC\}$  {out

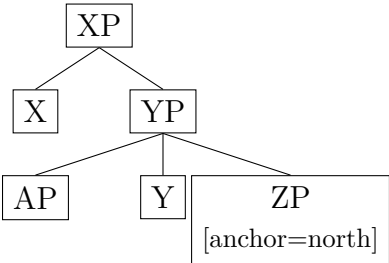

‘Mary is sure that it would not annoy John to reveal her heart to his girlfriend.’

(4) 我 講 中文
 1SG speak Chinese
 third line of.gloss

I speak Chinese.

A tree:

% Another tree:

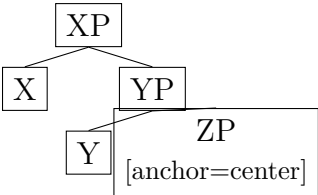

Table 1: Testing the caption

Mandarin	Cantonese	Taiwanese
AcadLang	HKU-70	Tsay
Beijing	Lee/Wong/Leung
Chang1	PaidoCantonese
Chang 2
Context
LiZhou
TCCM
Tong
Xinjiang
Zhou1
Zhou2
ZhouDinner

Mandarin	Cantonese	Taiwanese
ZhouNarratives		